

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 13.5 million (19.5% of the population).

There are a number of reasons why the number of people aged 65 and over has increased. One of the main reasons is that people are living longer. The life expectancy at birth in the UK is now 78 years for men and 82 years for women. This is a significant increase from the 1950s, when life expectancy at birth was 71 years for men and 76 years for women.

Another reason why the number of people aged 65 and over has increased is that people are having children later in life. This means that there are more people in the 65-74 age group than there were in the 1950s. This is because people who were born in the 1950s are now in the 65-74 age group.

There are a number of other reasons why the number of people aged 65 and over has increased. One of these is that people are getting married later in life. This means that there are more people in the 65-74 age group than there were in the 1950s. This is because people who were born in the 1950s are now in the 65-74 age group.
